The Mid-2006 Daily Torture, Terrorization and Torment Diary: Documenting Violations in the Last Democratic Fiefdom

Just how enthusiastically belligerent Chinada principals and their helpers were to demonstrate to coalition partners they were untouchable and unstoppable and how much they'd devolved into something less than human is evidenced in their behavior as documented in this daily diary. Plus, these violations of domestic and international law were being monitored in real time by U.S. intel agencies managing the back-channel environment; which means that President Bush and his inner core were privy to these circumstances on an on-going basis.

⁷ Noise disruption strategies took many forms. One of them was as a result of saturating Vancouver's downtown core with roaming security apparatus operatives in vehicles. Linked in real time to monitoring victims homes, like hypno-itches and in-home noise disruption technologies, vehicle honks and public service vehicle sirens were regularly used to disrupt privacy and create a ubiquity of state presence. Often references to death, killing and maiming were turned into "climate of fear" initiatives (death threat utterances).

⁸ The local police force was very active in back-channel belligerence.
